WELCOME TO METRO BOSTON

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT, REPORTER

Yes, it's officially spring, but no, it doesn't feel like it. The National Weather Service has been tracking an upcoming storm for about a week, and now that it's almost here, it's looking to be a doozy. Forecasters are now saying Boston could possibly see up to a foot of snow. Read more updates on what to expect with this nor'easter — the fourth this March. Read more on page 3 and at metroboston.us.

REPORT: MASS INDUSTRIES POLLUTING WATERWAYS

Massachusetts industries dumped excessive amounts of chemicals into the commonwealth's waterways more than 120 times in the last two years, according to a new report by the Environment Massachusetts Research & Policy Center, a nonprofit advocacy organization. The report, released Tuesday, comes amid efforts by the Trump administration to weaken the Environmental Protection Agency, the organization said. Policy experts looked at Clean Water Act compliance data between Jan. 2016 and Sept. 2017 and found that multiple industrial facilities were dumping more pollution than is legally allowed by their permit limits. "Here in Massachusetts, nearly 54 percent of major industrial facilities exceeded pollution limits at least once" in the period reviewed, said Elizabeth Berg, a report author and associate with Frontier Group. ## WALSH: SELF-DRIVING VEHICLE TESTS ON HOLD

Boston has put its self-driving car testing program on hold after an autonomous Uber vehicle struck and killed a woman walking in Tempe, Arizona. "We put the program on hold for a couple of days here to see what's going on," Boston Mayor Marty Walsh told reporters on Tuesday morning. "I think one of the things this tells us is we have to really look at who's going to be regulating this industry."

The city has partnered with nuTonomy, Optimus Ride and Aptiv for on-street testing of self-driving technology. Nutonomy has branched out to test throughout the South Boston Seaport while the other two companies have been confined to the Raymond Flynn Marine Park. "It's a tragedy what happened [Monday]," Walsh said. "You also learn from terrible accidents like that."

The fallas are burned in the streets as a tribute to St. Joseph, patron saint of the carpenters' guild.

5 THINGS YOU NEED TO KNOW

REPORT: CAMBRIDGE ANALYTICA PLAYED ROLE

The suspended chief executive of U.K.-based political consultancy Cambridge Analytica claimed in secretly recorded video that his company played a decisive role in the 2016 election campaign of President Donald Trump, Channel 4 News reported on Tuesday. British broadcaster Channel 4 News mounted a "sting operation" in which it secretly recorded Cambridge Analytica Chief Executive Alexander Nix saying he had met the then Republican presidential candidate "many times" and that his firm played a central role in the final months of the campaign. "We did all the research. We did all the data. We did all the analytics. We did all the targeting. We ran all the digital campaign and our data informed their strategy," Nix told an undercover reporter during a meeting in a London hotel.

TRUMP MUST FACE DEFAMATION LAWSUIT

A New York state judge on Tuesday said President Donald Trump must face a defamation lawsuit by a woman who accused him of sexually harassing her after she appeared on his former reality TV show. The decision by Justice Jennifer Schecter of New York state court in favor of restaurateur Summer Zervos, a former contestant on NBC's "The Apprentice," raises the prospect that Trump might have to answer embarrassing questions in court about his behavior toward women. She rejected Trump's claim that he was immune from being sued. "No one is above the law," the judge wrote. A White House representative was not available for comment on the ruling. Also on Tuesday, Karen McDougal, a former Playboy model who said she had an affair with Trump, filed suit in California to release her from a legal agreement requiring her to stay silent.

REAL FUR VS FAKE FUR

Real fur is considered by many to be cruel. Fake fur is often made from nonrenewable plastics, which can take hundreds of years to biodegrade. Which do you think is worse?

Fourth nor'easter of 2018 to hit Boston

Wednesday's evening commute will likely be affected be a snowy storm.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

8-12 INCHES
Snow expected to remain in Boston after this nor'easter

Even more snow is slated to hit the Northeast this week, despite the fact that spring has technically sprung.

The National Weather Service's Boston office issued a Winter Storm Warning for Massachusetts and parts of Rhode Island and Connecticut ahead of the coming nor'easter. The warning will be in effect from 8 a.m. Wednesday to 8 a.m. Thursday.

Previously, the weather service said that it was "confident" the Boston area will see some impact from this storm, but since the nor'easter was still a few days out, the "breadth and magnitude" were still uncertain.

Though the Winter Storm Warning has now been issued, forecasters are still uncertain about this storm, so they've issued winter storm watches as well. Along with this storm are the risks of strong winds and coastal flooding once again.

The storm is expected to hit Wednesday and Thursday. Forecasters are predicting higher snow totals as the nor'easter moves closer, with more than 6 inches of snow possible for Boston on Wednesday night. After this nor'easter is over, Boston could be left with 8 to 12 inches, according to the National Weather Service.

Wednesday's evening commute will most likely be affected by this nor'easter, which makes it a bit of a difficult storm to prepare for, Mayor Marty Walsh said at an event on Tuesday.

"This is supposed to happen in January, February, not in March."
Mayor Marty Walsh

"It's a complicated storm because it's going to start around noon, they say, and it's going to be heavier around 4 p.m., so it makes it very difficult to make judgment calls as far as parking and schools and transportation and getting home," he said. "Hopefully it'll be a little clearer as the day goes on. But it's going to be potentially a tough storm, just because of the timing of it. Four o'clock on a Wednesday afternoon is not the ideal time to be dealing with snow."

Areas to the south like Plymouth could get even more; the storm warning details that there could be total snow accumulations of 10 to 14 inches across the region.

Highway administrator Jonathan Gulliver warned residents to plan ahead when they travel both Wednesday and Thursday because the timing of the storm will differ depending on the region of the state, and with heavy snowfall expected, "driving could be hazardous at various times," he said in a statement.

Another nor'easter —the fourth this month — is expected to hit Massachusetts this week. GETTY IMAGES

This nor'easter will be the fourth for Massachusetts this month. The state is recovering from storms that battered the eastern part of the state, causing floods and power outages due to heavy, wet snow and strong winds.

"These March storms in the last couple of years have been brutal," Walsh said while at an event in Downtown Crossing on Tuesday. "This is supposed to happen in January, February, not in March. Today's the first day of spring, and it certainly doesn't feel like it."

Some changes are coming to the RMV and Massachusetts IDs. ISTOCK

RMV to close this weekend ahead of ID changes

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

Beginning Monday, March 26, you can get a Real ID instead of a regular Massachusetts driver's license. Here's what that means and what it requires.

The Registry of Motor Vehicles will close its service centers this weekend as the department upgrades its computer systems for the first time in 30 years.

The new system will help the RMV issue new types of driver's licenses, called Real ID — part of a federal mandate to increase security in the wake of the Sept. 11 attacks.

The RMV will be closed from Thursday, March 22 at 7 p.m. to Monday, March 26 at 8 a.m. The closure will shutter all RMV service centers and halt all online transactions and inspections at vehicle inspection stations over the weekend.

From Friday, March 23, to Monday, March 26, dealerships that usually register and inspect vehicles on behalf of the RMV will not process those services and AAA offices will not offer RMV services as well.

The new RMV computer system, called ATLAS, will revamp the online customer service portal. Once the system is up, there will also be new required documents and a new card option when it comes to getting or renewing any driver's license, ID card or learner's permit.

Beginning Monday, March 26, to get or renew a Massachusetts identification, residents will need these documents: one that shows their Social Security number, one that proves their lawful presence in the U.S. and their date of birth (e.g., a passport, birth certificate, permanent-resident card, employment card) and documents proving Massachusetts residency, like a utility bill or bank statement.

Monday also marks the first date you can get a Real ID, though they're not required until Oct. 2020.

What is a Real ID?

Real ID is a new federal security standard created in the wake of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks. Congress passed the Real ID Act in 2005, which establishes new minimum security standards for boarding commercial flights and accessing federal buildings.

You can still get a standard Massachusetts driver's license at the RMV or online, but after October 2020, it will not be an acceptable form of federal identification. That means you can't use your regular license to board a plane or enter federal buildings. You can still use your passport as ID while flying.

Real IDs cannot be processed online, so you'll have to visit an RMV location with all your required documents to obtain one. Real IDs, which will have a star in the upper right-hand corner, can be used to board planes after October 2020.

Confused about whether you'll need a Real ID or a regular license? Go to mass.gov/rmv to find your best fit and which documents you'll need for either option. You can also visit mass.gov/id to learn more.

DETAILS

The RMV will be closed from Thursday, March 22, at 7 p.m. to Monday, March 26, at 8 a.m. The closure will shutter all RMV service centers and halt all online transactions and inspections at vehicle-inspection stations over the weekend.

From Friday, March 23, through Monday, March 26, dealerships that usually register and inspect vehicles on behalf of the RMV will not process those services, and AAA offices will not offer RMV services as well.

The figure above is not intended to represent obesity but rather to demonstrate parts of the body affected by cancer risk associated with obesity.

Can Obesity Cause Cancer?

Obesity is a health condition in which a person's body has too much fat tissue for it to function normally. Being obese increases one's risk for a multitude of health complications and diseases, including several types of cancer.

There are a few leading theories about which obesity-related conditions can cause cancer. These include chronic inflammation, higher levels of hormones such as estrogen and leptin, and an excess of insulin and/or glucose in the blood — all of which result in disruption or changes to normal cells, which may lead to cancer.

Obesity has been linked to thirteen types of cancer with a stronger risk associated with breast, esophageal and endometrial cancers, among others. While many factors influence one's cancer risk, maintaining a healthy body weight, or, losing weight if you are overweight or obese, is one way to help reduce that risk.

If you are trying to lose weight, consult your physician to determine which dietary changes and exercise plans will work best for you. Dana-Farber nutritionists recommend the following tips to lose weight:

- Drink plenty of water throughout the day.
- Follow an eating schedule and don't skip any meals or snacks to prevent overeating later.
- Fill up on nourishing, naturally low-calorie foods, such as fruits and veggies. The fiber will keep you full and help prevent overeating.
- Adjust your portions by using a smaller plate, which will make a smaller portion look bigger.
- Balance your plate by making at least half of your plate consist of vegetables and fruit. One quarter of your plate should be lean protein, and one quarter whole grains.
- Incorporate moderate exercise, if possible.
- Make sure you're getting enough sleep.

10 Celebrities that've already split in 2018

Less than three months in, and all these couples are out. Haven't you heard? Not only did Vanessa Trump file for divorce from Donald Trump Jr., but she did it because he was reportedly cheap AF. Multiple sources confirmed to Page Six that Vanessa's homelife is devoid of glam — and that Don Jr. "treats her like a second-class citizen." Rude. And don't even get us started on Aubrey. Boy, bye. But Don Jr. and Vanessa aren't the only couple that's quit. Here are the celebrity breakups of 2018 so far. Fare thee well, love and happiness. Hello, future prenups! METRO

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

DONALD TRUMP JR. AND VANESSA TRUMP
After 12 years of marriage and five children, Vanessa Trump filed for divorce from her husband, Donald Trump, Jr. In a statement, the couple told Page Six they "will always have tremendous respect for each other." Vanessa's way of showing said tremendous respect? By hiring a criminal defense lawyer.

ANDERSON COOPER AND BENJAMIN MAISANI
The silver fox is back on the market, kind of: Cooper and Maisani split after nine years together, but made sure to play it cool for their official statement. "Benjamin and I separated as boyfriends some time ago. We are still family to each other, and love each other very much. We remain the best of friends, and will continue to share much of our lives together." Mmhm.

TISHA CAMPBELL AND DUANE MARTIN
The "Martin" star and her husband split after — wait for it — 21 whole years of marriage. In February, the actress took to Twitter to make the announcement, writing, "After 27 years of being together and 2 amazing children, it pains me to announce that I've filed for divorce. It's an emotional time and I graciously ask for privacy for me, our children and the rest of our family." OK!

CLAIRE FOY AND STEPHEN CAMPBELL MOORE
"The Crown" star and her actor beau confirmed they were going their separate ways after four years of marriage in February. "We can confirm we have separated and have been for some time," they wrote in a statement to Us Weekly. "We do, however, continue as great friends with the utmost respect for one another." The pair shares a two-year-old daughter.

ALICIA SILVERSTONE AND CHRISTOPHER JARECKI
The "Clueless" star and her husband called it done after 20 whole years together. In a statement to E!, Silverstone's publicist wrote, "They still deeply love and respect each other and remain very close friends but have mutually decided to separate after being together for 20 years. They have a son together who they will continue to coparent."

NAS AND NICKI MINAJ
Sometime after Nicki Minaj told Ellen about her and Nas' celibate sleepovers, these two called it quits: After seven months together, a source says the two just "fizzled out."

LENA DUNHAM AND JACK ANTONOFF
Your problematic fave and her boyfriend of five years announced earlier this year that they had "amicably" split. You've read on these very pages about bumps along the way that leave us colored unsurprised.

ALESSANDRA AMBROSIO AND JAMIE MAZUR
After being engaged for 10 years, the model and her businessman beau decided to just cancel the whole thing. They share two children: Anja, 9, and Noah, 5.

JENNIFER ANISTON AND JUSTIN THEROUX
In the end, Justin was just too edgy for Jennifer: The A-list celebrity couple announced their "mutual and lovingly made" decision to split. They were engaged in August 2012 and married in August 2015.

JULIE BOWEN AND SCOTT PHILLIPS
The "Modern Family" star and her husband, a real estate investor, separated after 13 year of marriage earlier this year. They share three sons together: Oliver, John and Gustav. Poor Gustav.

This Boston McDonald's just got a high-tech upgrade

A Boston McDonald's is making a lot of high-tech changes to how it does business.

The restaurant on Washington Street in Downtown Crossing celebrated its highly anticipated grand reopening Tuesday morning, complete with a Chinese Lion Dance performance as well as a ribbon-cutting ceremony featuring Mayor Marty Walsh. The space has been completely revamped to meet the needs of customers in the digital age.

The new and improved McDonald's features self-order kiosks, where guests can browse the menu, place orders and even pay using cards or services like Apple and Android Pay. The technology was introduced at a location in Everett last year and is being used in thousands of McDonald's across the country, including more than 100 in New England.

In addition to the kiosks, the Downtown Crossing restaurant will feature table service, so guests can relax as their food is being prepared. It will be served to them by a McDonald's crew member.

"We're thrilled to open the doors to our newly renovated restaurant to the Downtown Crossing community," owner and operator Carol Chin said at the event. "This is part of McDonald's commitment to modernization and evolving our customers' experience."

Walsh praised Chin and her husband, Vern, for their donations to the Josiah Quincy Upper School and Elementary School during the ceremony, as well as for the part they play in revitalizing the Downtown Crossing area. The mayor also noted how their business is indicative of the important contributions women and immigrants make to the city.

Owners Carol and Vern Chin with Mayor Walsh.

"This business here is an immigrant-owned business. This business here is a woman-owned business," Walsh said. "This business here shows you that it's important, as Boston is an international city, to be able to have all of the different pieces to move our city forward."

Following Tuesday's announcement that McDonald's as a whole plans to cut its greenhouse gas emissions, the mayor thanked the company for its efforts to combat climate change.

"McDonald's now is a partner with the United States in making sure that we have a clean environment and that we fight climate change," Walsh said. "We see the effects of climate change in our city. We've seen it in the last several months with the rising sea tide with the storm surges, with the first day of spring today and we're expecting anywhere from 5 to 10 inches of snow tomorrow."

"Boston is a climate leader. We're committed to reducing the carbon footprint," he added. "Having a corporation like McDonald's involved in that conversation is so important to the future of our country and what we're doing in this area." MATT JUUL

Sorry, but Trish from 'Jessica Jones' is the absolute worst

Leave Jessica alone already, ya goon.

RACHAEL VAUGHAN CLEMMONS
rachael.clemmons@metro.us

Sorry, Trish: Not even a newfound obsession with guns can make you interesting. NETFLIX

There are toxic friends, and then there's Trish from Marvel's "Jessica Jones." And in the second season, she's doing the most.

Trish is a former child star who has it all: lots of money, a hot boyfriend, a good job and a superpowered best friend with poor taste in jeans. But that's not enough for her, and yes, spoilers are ahead.

For some reason, Trish spends the majority of the second season torturing her so-called best friend Jessica and her assistant, Malcolm, in a variety of ways, in the name of making a name for herself as more than just a fluff journalist. And that's when she's not becoming addicted to whatever is in Simpson's inhaler, or pulling out a gun at the most inappropriate, inopportune moments. She literally brings Jessica the ashes of her dead family to manipulate her into taking action against IGH. She has a night of passion with Malcolm, just to lock him in the trunk of her car once she's done using him. Part of her motivation is her addictive personality. But the other part? She's the worst.

Because for Trish, it's not enough to have a voice. She has to be the most important voice in the room. Oh, and she wants superpowers, too. And she'll basically kill herself to get them — and then blame Jessica for not letting her die.

In the end, her extreme thirst for being special — because being white, rich and privileged isn't enough — alienates her from the people who mean the most to her. And it somehow makes her think killing her best friend's mom is a totally OK thing to do. (To be clear, even if your best friend's mother is a brain-damaged pseudo-psychopath with superhuman strength and rage blackouts, you can't just jump out of your hospital bed, head to the nearest closed carnival, and shoot her clean in the skull. Best friends don't shoot their best friend's moms, man.)

Joke's on her, though. If Trish thinks being able to catch her phone with her foot a superpower worth losing her job, her best friend and the comfort of being able to afford a one bedroom apartment in New York City, well. She's more than the worst. She's just a straight up goon.

The entire second season of "Jessica Jones" is available to stream now, on Netflix.

Scanavino: 'Law and Order' succeeds because we keep it real

"Special Victims Unit" is a not-so-guilty pleasure of just about everyone we know. Ahead of tonight's new episode, we ask Peter Scanavino how it's stayed relevant for 19 seasons.

MWN
letters@metro.us

Scanavino has been a series regular since 2014. PROVIDED

Mariska Hargitay, the "SVU" O.G. GETTY IMAGES

Nineteen years in, "Law and Order: SVU" has returned with the same ingredients that have made it one of the favorite series of all time: cases that mimic real life (often noted as being "ripped from the headlines") and the experiences of detectives and police officers who must try to escape their profession to live a normal life.

Several topics are touched in the series and, according to the Peter Scanavino, who plays Detective Dominick Carisi, should be treated with care, precisely because of the situations they present.

"One of these is related to sexual abuse, especially at a time when Hollywood has been hit by the issue. Our mission is not to keep quiet and not talk about this, but we know we must be careful not to hurt people who are involved in these types of cases."

That's one of the reasons Scanavino says the series has been so successful: Each case is treated with the respect it deserves.

"Many shows appeal to sensationalism to tell stories and gain an audience. We, on the contrary, want justice to be done in a certain way, and for society to finally understand that we're living in a difficult world. What do we want to leave our children with? We want viewers to think about that when they watch the series and each one of the cases."

Scanavino says another reason the show's been around so long is that characters get to say farewell when their story comes to a close (we'll always miss you, Stabler!). And sometimes a familiar face reappears — ADA Alexandra Cabot (Stephanie March) returns to screens in April.

Outside his TV life, Scanavino lives far away from the cameras. He recently became a father for the third time.

"So when I'm not locking up criminals, I spend it changing diapers," joked the 38-year-old actor.

"Law & Order: SVU" airs Wednesdays at 9 p.m. on NBC and is available the next day on Hulu.

GOODBYE, GOAT?

It's starting to look like the Patriots may have mortgaged the next 10 years of their franchise by trading Jimmy Garoppolo in order to run it back one or two more years with the greatest QB of all-time, Tom Brady.

Many Patriots fans are fine with this because, ya know, it's Tom Friggin' Brady — but I strongly disagree with the idea.

The final installment of the "Tom vs. Time" Facebook thingy was alarming in that it had a "this is the end" type tone to it, and this week the docu-series' director told The MMQB's Peter King that he believes Brady is going to retire relatively soon.

"This idea that [Brady] is going to play for four or five more season … I mean, this is just me, the guy who's been around him for a while now. I just have a hard time envisioning that, to be candid," director Gotham Chopra said. "But we'll see. I do think that these next few weeks and months are a critical time for him."

Few weeks and months? What does that mean?!?!

MORE FOOTBALL, PLEASE

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

A few months back we were told by many that pro football was in decline. Then in January, Fox agreed to pay the NFL an obscene $60 million PER GAME for the rights to "Thursday Night Football." A few days later, pro wrestling tycoon Vince McMahon said he was bringing back the XFL. Now, Charlie Ebersol — the son of original XFL co-founder and TV executive Dick Ebersol – announced this week that he's starting his own pro football league. The Alliance of American Football will begin on Feb. 9, 2019, the weekend after Super Bowl LIII.

Ebersol's league will be based around the interest in fantasy football.

"Fifty-nine million people play fantasy and 20 million people play only fantasy football," Ebersol told ESPN. "We have to be able to take advantage of the people who just stop playing fantasy when the NFL season ends. … Our investors here understand it's a seven- to 10-year plan."

SOX TRADE BLOCK

The Red Sox are looking to trade an infielder, whether it be Deven Marrero or Brock Holt (pictured here with awesome hair) — according to Boston Sports Journal's Sean McAdam.

The Sox have more quality infielders than roster spots right now and are looking to unload one of the players. With Rafael Devers, Eduardo Nunez, Xander Bogaerts all with guaranteed spots in the infield — someone on the roster has to go.

In addition, Dustin Pedroia is expected to be back in the Red Sox lineup in early May. Pedroia, recovering from knee surgery, asked to play in several spring training games and believes he's good to go now but the Sox are rightfully using extra precautions with the 34-year-old.

NOT THIS CRAP AGAIN

ESPN The Magazine came out with a top 20 most dominant athletes of the past 20 years list this week and wouldn't you know it – Peyton Manning finished third, behind Tiger Woods and LeBron James.

Tom Brady?

He finished 20th.

The mag compiled the list based on some odd formula, and it likely the same people that brought us the worst football statistic of all-time earlier this decade … QBR!

You remember QBR, right? Late in the 2015 season, the Jets' Ryan Fitzpatrick had fewer wins, yards, completions, touchdowns and a worse completion percentage than Brady, yet he had a decidedly better QBR than No. 12.

Sky is the limit for B's Donato

The Bruins rookie has already shown that he belongs at the NHL level.

Ryan Donato gives fist-bumps to his Bruins teammates before his first game at the NHL level. GETTY IMAGES

Last Friday night, the Harvard men's hockey team lost 5-4 to Clarkson in overtime of an ECAC Hockey semifinal in Lake Placid, New York. It was the abrupt end to a disappointing season for the Crimson, who won the Beanpot, reached the Frozen Four last season - and had high expectations for this campaign but failed to live up to them.

Playing for his father Ted (the former Bruin and Catholic Memorial great), forward Ryan Donato finished his junior season with two assists against the Golden Knights, giving him 43 points (26 goals, 17 assists) in 2017-18. A Hobey Baker finalist (given to college hockey's top player) and member of Team USA at the Pyeongchang Olympics, Donato made the decision on Sunday to turn pro and sign a two-year entry-level deal with the Bruins (45-17-9).

So there he was on Monday at TD Garden, making his NHL debut vs. Columbus (40-28-5).

If this whirlwind of emotion and activity affected him, you wouldn't know it as Donato went out and earned the No. 1 star of the game. He picked up three points (1 goal, 2 assists) as Boston fell 5-4 in overtime to the Blue Jackets. Veteran winger Rick Nash (3 goals, 3 assists in 11 games as a Bruin) was a last-second scratch due to an upper-body injury so Donato was elevated from the third line to the second line, skating on the left wing with David Krejci (17 goals, 21 assists) at center and Danton Heinen (13 goals, 29 assists) on the right wing. From his first shift, the 21-year-old from Scituate looked like he belonged as he became the eighth Bruin to score his first career regular season goal this season. Donato was also the first Bruin since Jarno Kultanen on Oct. 5, 2000 to have a multiple-point game in his NHL debut.

"It kind of felt like a dream and I really didn't even get that warmed up because I was too focused on everything else and just the whole situation," Donato said. "It was an unbelievable experience and a blessing [Monday night]."

Boston will be careful not to heap too much pressure on Donato — this is a guy who talked about finishing some term papers for his classes at Harvard before embarking on the Bruins' upcoming road trip — but they know they could have something special here.

"He's on the puck as advertised in terms of his compete [level]," noted Bruins head coach Bruce Cassidy. "He did a real good job, I liked him a lot and I'm sure that Krech [David Krejci] did as well. They seemed to have good chemistry."

For years, Boston's drafting and development of players was spotty at best. This is no longer the case under GM Don Sweeney (who had to have the inside track on Donato since he went to Harvard and played with Ted there and in Boston) as the Bruins have continually been able to plug in younger players this season when needed due to their plethora of injuries to key pieces. They have also been successful in signing their top college draft picks like Donato and Wisconsin center Trent Frederic, who left the Badgers after two seasons last week to sign a three-year entry-level deal with the Bruins. He had his first professional assist on Sunday for the Providence Bruins. This shows how the B's aren't just built for a Cup run this season, they look like a club that should be a top team in the NHL for years to come based on an NHL and AHL roster that are both brimming with talent.

The Bruins begin a very difficult four-game Western Conference road trip in St. Louis (39-28-5) on Wednesday (8, NBCSN) before going to Dallas (38-27-8) on Friday (8:30, NESN).

Aries Take on responsibilities and show everyone what you are capable of. Don't limit what you can do just because someone is being unreasonable. Know your target.

Taurus Knowledge is a powerful tool that will give you the edge you need when faced with competition. Keep the facts in mind and your ideas a secret.

Gemini Take advantage of a situation that will help you do things a little differently or allow you to learn something new. Do the work and you'll reap the rewards.

Cancer Taking on a job that doesn't offer remuneration will turn into a burden as well as lead to a loss of respect. Offer your services, but insist on something in return.

Leo You can rise to the top. Make positive changes that will encourage more opportunities. A change to the way you earn your living or handle your money looks promising.

Virgo Only participate in functions that won't financially or physically jeopardize you. Overdoing it to prove a point will backfire, leaving you at a loss.

Libra A change to the way you handle your money will be necessary. Debt needs to be cleared before you start spending money. Talk to an adviser or put a budget into effect.

Scorpio Dig in and get things done. What you accomplish will help you figure out what you want to do next and how you can use your creativity to get ahead.

Sagittarius You'll never have the approval of everyone around you, so stop waiting and start following your heart and gut feelings. Trust in yourself, not in what others do or say.

Capricorn Think twice before you take over for someone who hasn't been doing a good job. You'll be left to deal with authority figures who won't care if you are just a facilitator.

Aquarius Reach out to someone who can offer you alternatives. Knowing your options will make it easier to avoid wasting time. Being realistic and having a good plan.

Pisces Revisit old dreams and make a point to reconnect with people you miss and lost touch with. Learn from your past and restructure the way you move forward. EUGENIA LAST
